CHINA COAL.

WHILE diplomatists are writing verbose despatches, and private individuals, aided by the Asiatic Society, are succeeding in throwing no inconsiderable light upon the mineral resources of China, it is somewhat strange that no direct efforts are being made by the foreign mercantile community to avail itself of the information already acquired. The soil of China may be conclusively asserted to contain within its bosom treasures of coal and metal which will repay prudent enterprise; and were there no stronger grounds for confidence than the development already reached under native auspices enough to encourage foreign enterprise have been willing to credit Sir R. Al. cock, personally, with an enlightened comprehension of the necessities of the empire. Unfortunately he has so completely turned his back upon the views above expressed that we can only regard them as the indications of one of those occasional flashes of wisdom to which his best friends assert he is at times amenable. We have it, at all events, upon record that some nine months ago the British Minister concurred in the necessity of taking a determined tone with the Chinese; and this justifies a hope in the possibility that he may yet once more return to a similar state of mind, especially when he becomes convinced of the indiguant feeling to which his latest productions have given rise; and in view of this possibility, it is worth while to ask whether something might not be done to take advantage of any such opportunity to place before him and Her Majesty's Government a well-digested scheme for working the coal, and other, mines near the Coast under foreign supervision? We put the Chinese Government side altogether. When our own authorities have made up their minds to accept a schemo, it must be presented to the Chinese in its entirety, subject to no modifications to suit their prejudices but with an unmistakeable avowal of our intentions to work it with or without

A company might easily be formed at scarcely any expense whatever until it commenced operations. An agent might be deputed to examine the coal fields of the North in extenso, in company with native officials. If it be urged that the Chinese would not consent, let us remind our readers that some three years ago the American Minister not only made the Chinese give assistance and protection to a United States citizen who was travelling for that purpose, but actually made the Chinese Government pay for the "valuable report" with which he furnished them to the tune of 500 taels and all expenses! What Mr Burlingame did in 1864 could be done with more lasting results by Sir Rutherford Alcock in 1868.

OUR Canton correspondent writes :- Darng his Consulship at this port, Dr., now Sir John. Bowring has placed on record that honor is the ruling principle of the Cantonese : and His. Excellency's opinion would have defied contradiction at this very day but for an unprecedented event, which our long-tail friends relate with the chorus of "no have hear Canton so fashion pidgin." The principals of a native bank establishment have bolted, and the liabilities of the institution are at sted to be about 40,000 table. It appears that the concern speculated in Salt, and advanced loans to theatrical troupes, but in both operations it incurred heavy losses; and as the working capital of the native banking corporation of this place consists principally of the deposits belonging to wealthy individuals, the alternative to "cut and slip" seems to have been preferred by the delinquents in order to avoid the typhoon-the clamont of the creditors for refunding the deposits, of whom a foreign firm is said to be one to the extent of about $4,000. The heat experienced here during most part of the past week, almost unusual for the first month of summer, seems to have contributed to a heavy fall in the price of flowers (from 28 taels to 14 taels) adapted for scenting teas for the English market. Consequently, as about twenty catt'es of flowers are sufficient to scent a picul of tea, the bargains in the new teas' could have been effected at three or four tiels lower, had our chanzes been less impatient and less apprehensive of not getting hold of 'crack " chops. Thus the soute Celestial with his palavering has once more got to the windward of his foreign customer. If a system of periodical public sales, such as the one which is in vogue in the interior. be introduced at this mart also, it will undoubtedly be conducive to the interests of all concerned; whilst the system now adopted by striking bargains before the t as are prepared in balk and placed on the nurket, upon a calculation of the " probable high cost" of scenting flower, fends to benefit the native merchants rather than the foreign buyers.

THE REBELLION. Even those Chinese, who have been reluctant hitherto to admit the possibility of such a rebellion occurring as could be sup posed formidable enough to threaten the stability of the Imperial throne, are now beginning openly to express their fears as to the probable outturn of events in the north. The spasmodic successes which are reported on the side of the Imperial forces, are no longer sufficient to convince those who watch the progress of events, that there is sufficient strength left to cope with the present disasters. Whataver the minor de tails of the state of affairs, these broad facts which cannot be gainsaid; present, to the most saugume, an ugly appearance. The statement that the Rubel Forces had been dispersed conveys a very erroneous impres sion as to what, we hear upon very good authority, is actually the case. The truth is they are in such numbers that they have been able to divide without impairing their strength, and occupy some four or five stattions from which there is little hope that the Imperialists can by possibility distodge them. Meantime Li-Hung-Chang, upon whom the whole of the Imperialists' hopes were centred, tarries at Tientsin, and an pears afraid to leave that city. It is rumonred that a portion of the grain designer for Pekin has already been seized, and that the Maliomedan Rebels friendly to the west of Pekin.

It would thus appear, as some time ago surmised by a contemporary; that the march on Tientsin was only a foint to draw away the Imperial forces from the Capital, and that Pokin is the prize of which the insurgents are aiming, and which it seems possible they may success it capturing. These circumstances alone are sufficient to cause grave apprehension; the more so, as, whatever may be the immediate course of events, it is certain that the Imperiforces can in the long run offer no opposition to the Robels. They are already cowed by misfo tune and insubordinate from want pay. But more than this, there is no longer am my them confidence in their own cause or in their own leaders. Rumour is busy with surmises as to what will happe Lon; and it is even whispered that if he his not liaving succeeded earlier.
